EDITOR'S WORD

Its more than just what you see!

It's almost unbelievable that we're finally here, the very fast edition of Art and War rolls down to your hands this month and we are extremely excited to be starting this journey with you. Working on this publication has been a wholesome journey of knowledge sharing and learning, me and the editorial staff have managed to wander and collect all the information we think and hope will satisfy your expectations and beyond.

In this first edition we have managed to meet and interview artists across the country and research beyond our borders. We bring to you the journeys- from the beginning, the struggles, the excitements, the revelations, the nurturement, the creativity, the passion, the failures and the successes of our visual artists in various fields from drawing and painting to design.

With the current and ongoing global situation in Europe, we also touch on the current matters such as wars and how they co-relate with art both positively and negatively. We bring you all the information you need to your fingertips, we made sure the artists got to address all the questions you our audience and us had and so much more interesting details and stories.

Castrol's ARTWORLD

“Life is a journey with no set destination plenty learning steps along the way and for me art has been a way through life, like my guardian angel.”

My name is Fidel Castrol, I was born in Lang'ata constituency on 30th June 2000. Growing up in a family of four siblings and being the only son might seem to be the best but growing up with one parent wasn't. My family moved twice, to Kisumu and then to Siaya so I changed schools a lot and finally completed my primary education in Ugenya at St. Mary's Ukwala Boys. At a young age it was pretty clear I had an interest in art and this was evident from how often I'd get into trouble for drawing on the class boards and on my locker desk. After my primary education I joined St. Joseph's Boys Kitale where I got to further develop my art talent, the school provided art classes which to me was the best part and years prior to campus of my art life. I got to know more and explore further on my artistic limits and to no surprise I realised just how much I loved art. It was also in high school that I got to choose between my two interests, I grew up loving football and it was in high school that I had to drop football for art as I found art more interesting and decided to give it more of my time.

In 2019 after completing my high school studies I joined Kenyatta University on a four-year degree programme to study B.A Fine Art majoring in Graphic Design. As usual the more you explore the more interests you develop, I've got to develop more interests in painting and sculpture as they are more relaxing art forms. I began my first permanent hustle in 2021, this was after the Covid-19 outbreak had caused a worldwide lockdown and we had just come back from home. This was a painting job at a restaurant.

I have also gotten to develop interest in graphic design and animation even though I was not able to take animation as a unit I study, to explore the use of technology in art through graphic by use of softwares has been a very fun experience.

On joining campus I began hustling by making portraits of people and selling to them and further developed to painting. ART IN TIMES OF WAR

Art can be defined as something that stimulates an individuals' thoughts, emotions, beliefs or ideas through senses.

Visual art forms like painting and sculpting are therapeutic in nature and have been used in centres to help patients i.e. with depression to open up and express themselves and also by artists to express their thoughts and opinions on social issues. War is defined as an intense armed conflict between states, governments, societies such as mercenaries, insurgents and militias.

Currently in the world, there is a war going on between Russia and Ukraine. Russia began a full scale invasion of Ukraine on 24th February 2022 in an escalation of the Russo-Ukrainian War that began in 2014. The invasion is the biggest conventional military attack on a sovereign state in Europe since World War II. Ukrainians' livelihood has been greatly changed as they flee the country fearing for their lives, families have been separated and children traumatized, this has greatly affected the Ukrainian economy and thus the thrown the country

Anime Voyage

‘I am pushing towards my Goals and this time I have no excuses. Anime has proven to be both educative and fun to watch and this only boosts my interest in it further.’

Have you ever wondered what you were put in this world for? I really don't know how I came to love animations. My love for it is just immense and it keeps growing. I see so many great animators on YouTube creating their own animations from scratch and they have become a huge inspiration to me. People like Swoozie, Brent Noll and Maximous Pauson have played a huge roll in my animation journey. I want to be able to come up with my own original art and surpass them. I discovered Naruto in my teens and I was pretty inspired because that was a whole different level of professional animation. My friends and parents thought it was just a phase but I'm still very much into it.

As a kid I was always curious about the creation of cartoons but slowly my interest faded since I was raised in a very cultured environment which forced me to limit myself to the strenuous educational system. I did not find any chance to venture into my passion at that time so I resorted to drawing a few pieces from time to time till I eventually stopped.

It was during Quarantine that I chose to look back into the creation of cartoons and I found that so much had evolved. My love for Animations was rekindled. I found out about anime which was categorized differently from the cartoons I normally saw on regular Tv. I felt like I had finally found my calling. I am the first in my family to venture into Art so I have no one to show me the path to stay on as I take this journey. I rely on information I find on the internet and on my teachers. I know the journey won't be smooth sailing but I am ready to face anything that comes my way. so far I have had my fair share of challenges; I did not have the right equipment to start and software. Acquiring them proved to be a challenge to me since they were very expensive. Luckily, I have the support of my two loving parents and family members who all chipped in to help. I have managed to get a few of the required equipment's to produce animations and since then it has been smooth sailing. I am left with the task to prove my worth to the world. Art In Times of War

Art is a highly diverse range of human activities engaged in creating visual, auditory, or performed artifacts—artworks—that express the author's imaginative or technical skill, and are intended to be appreciated for their beauty or emotional power.

Visual art produced in the Byzantine Empire and in countries under its political control or cultural influence, among them Ukraine.

Over the centuries the Ukrainian people have evolved a varied folk art. Embroidery, wood carving, ceramics, and weaving are highly developed, with stylized ornamentation that represents many regional styles but now since Ukraine and Russia are at war there has been a major impact on the art industry.

The galleries cannot operate anymore since the galleries are now being used as bunker. The galleries are being used as a bomb shelter. In the past few days, artists from across the world have been producing art pieces on various NFT platforms to express their anguish over the Russia-Ukraine war.

COLOURFUL Castle

“Art is a never-ending journey that has its lessons, ups and downs, concepts that one embraces along the way. I guess the same case goes to life in general. That’s why I choose to experience life as it comes rather than try and control what is not meant to be controlled but rather, be experienced.”

Growing up in a small town, at the time, I wasn’t exposed to visual contemporary art. However, performing arts was quite dominant amongst kids, churches and school. Music and theatre were at their prime.

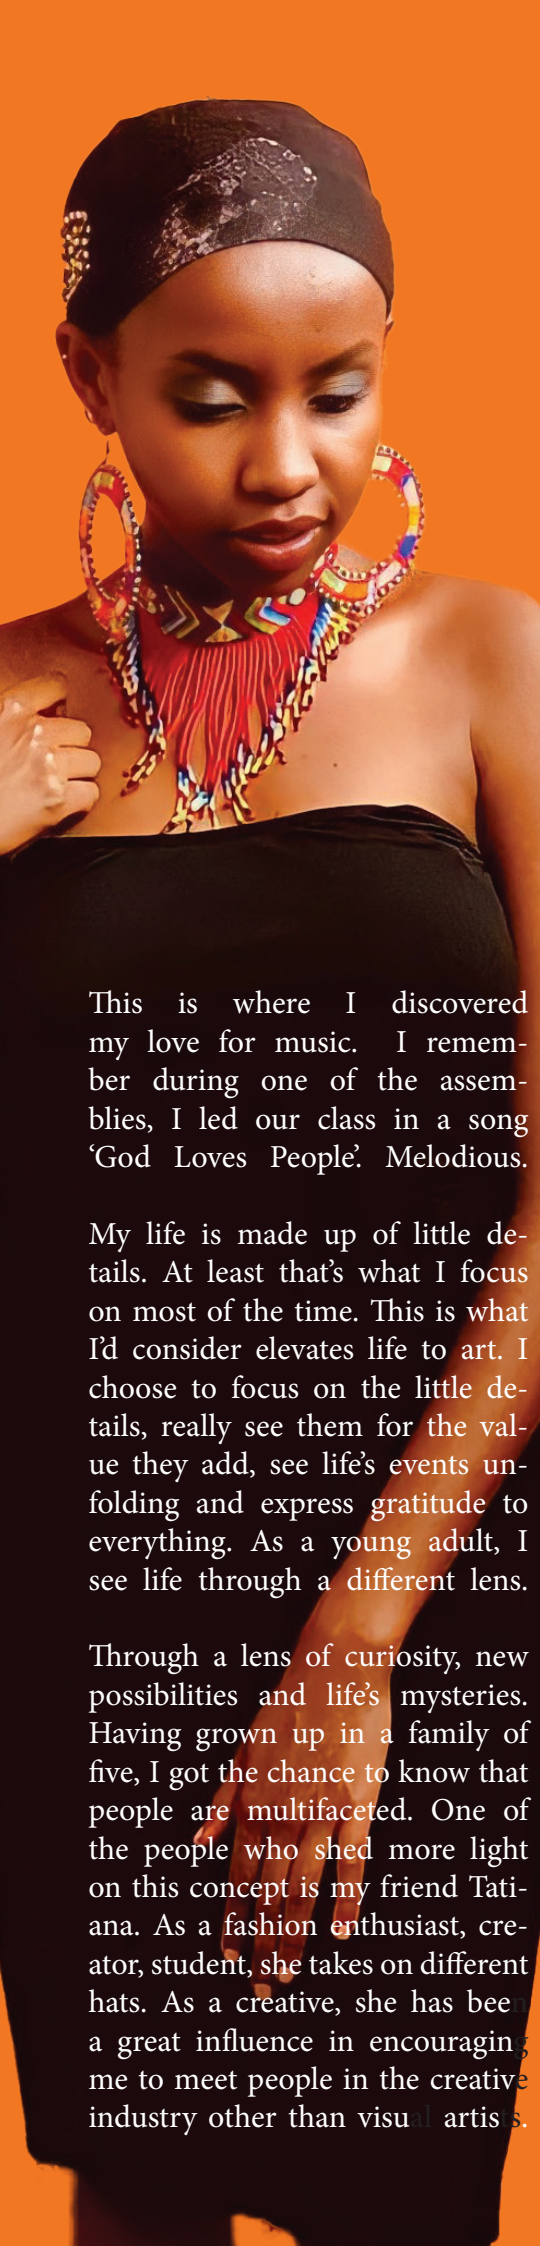

When I was old enough for Sunday School, one of my teachers introduced a dance program in church. We would go for practice on Saturday evening. The church was close to where we lived so my elder siblings or my mum would come pick me up after practice. I got to dance and make new friends, which was so cool. After a while, the church relocated to a different county and that marked the end of an era. To

We moved to a different church and I had to join the new Sunday School. Fitting in wasn’t a challenge as I made friends pretty fast. I even found some people who we used to go to primary school together. My former dance teacher joined our church after sometime.

As you probably guessed it, the dance program was back. By this time, we had also relocated to a place that was a bit farther from this particular church. So, I wasn’t sure if my parents would allow me to stay for practice. I was still in lower primary at the time. The dance teacher had a solid plan. at a different church for kids. The younger kids would practice on Sundays after service and the older kids

My mum was on board and said she would pick me up after practice. Those days were so fun. As the years went by, I joined the Saturday practice and started performing in church. I really enjoyed working with other kids under the guidance of someone who was so talented. We went on to compete against other dance teams in the region. We had an annual camp

I never slept in the church grounds during camp. I used to commute from home every day for the four days. This was because I had some chest complications and I got sick easily.

This is where I discovered my love for music. I remember during one of the assemblies, I led our class in a song 'God Loves People'. Melodious.

My life is made up of little details. At least that's what I focus on most of the time. This is what I'd consider elevates life to art. I choose to focus on the little details, really see them for the value they add, see life's events unfolding and express gratitude to everything. As a young adult, I see life through a different lens.

Through a lens of curiosity, new possibilities and life's mysteries. Having grown up in a family of five, I got the chance to know that people are multifaceted. One of the people who shed more light on this concept is my friend Tatiana. As a fashion enthusiast, creator, student, she takes on different hats. As a creative, she has been a great influence in encouraging me to meet people in the creative industry other than visual artists.

That's where I was officially introduced to creative arts as a subject. The drawings I did were like any other kids' drawings; carefree and humorous. The highlight of that year was that I could carry snacks to school. I made new friends along the way and the transition wasn't so hard. Whenever there was a school event such as Parents' Day, a class or two would be chosen to present something creative.

A few months before I joined university, I came to Nairobi to have a chat with artists that were practicing art professionally. It was such a surreal experience.

The artists said that there wasn't any other profession that they could consider getting into. Despite the financial challenges that most artists face, they choose to do their passion rather than a '9-5' job. I went to Dust Depot studio, now The Hive, frequently whenever I was in Nairobi. The artists were not only welcoming but helpful as well. I believe my experience there really influenced me to choosing Fine Art as my choice of study in university.

I am a creator that dips her toes in different disciplines of art. I am currently experimenting, learning and understanding: Graffiti, Pencil drawing, Graphic Design, Sculpture, Painting and Mandala Art. It is an amazing journey. I have exhibited my pieces in different pop ups in Nairobi and Nanyuki. Meeting other artists and sharing ideas, life experiences and ideologies has been the highlight of those exhibitions. There is some sort of appreciation of art that I always get whenever I have the opportunity to learn from other creators.

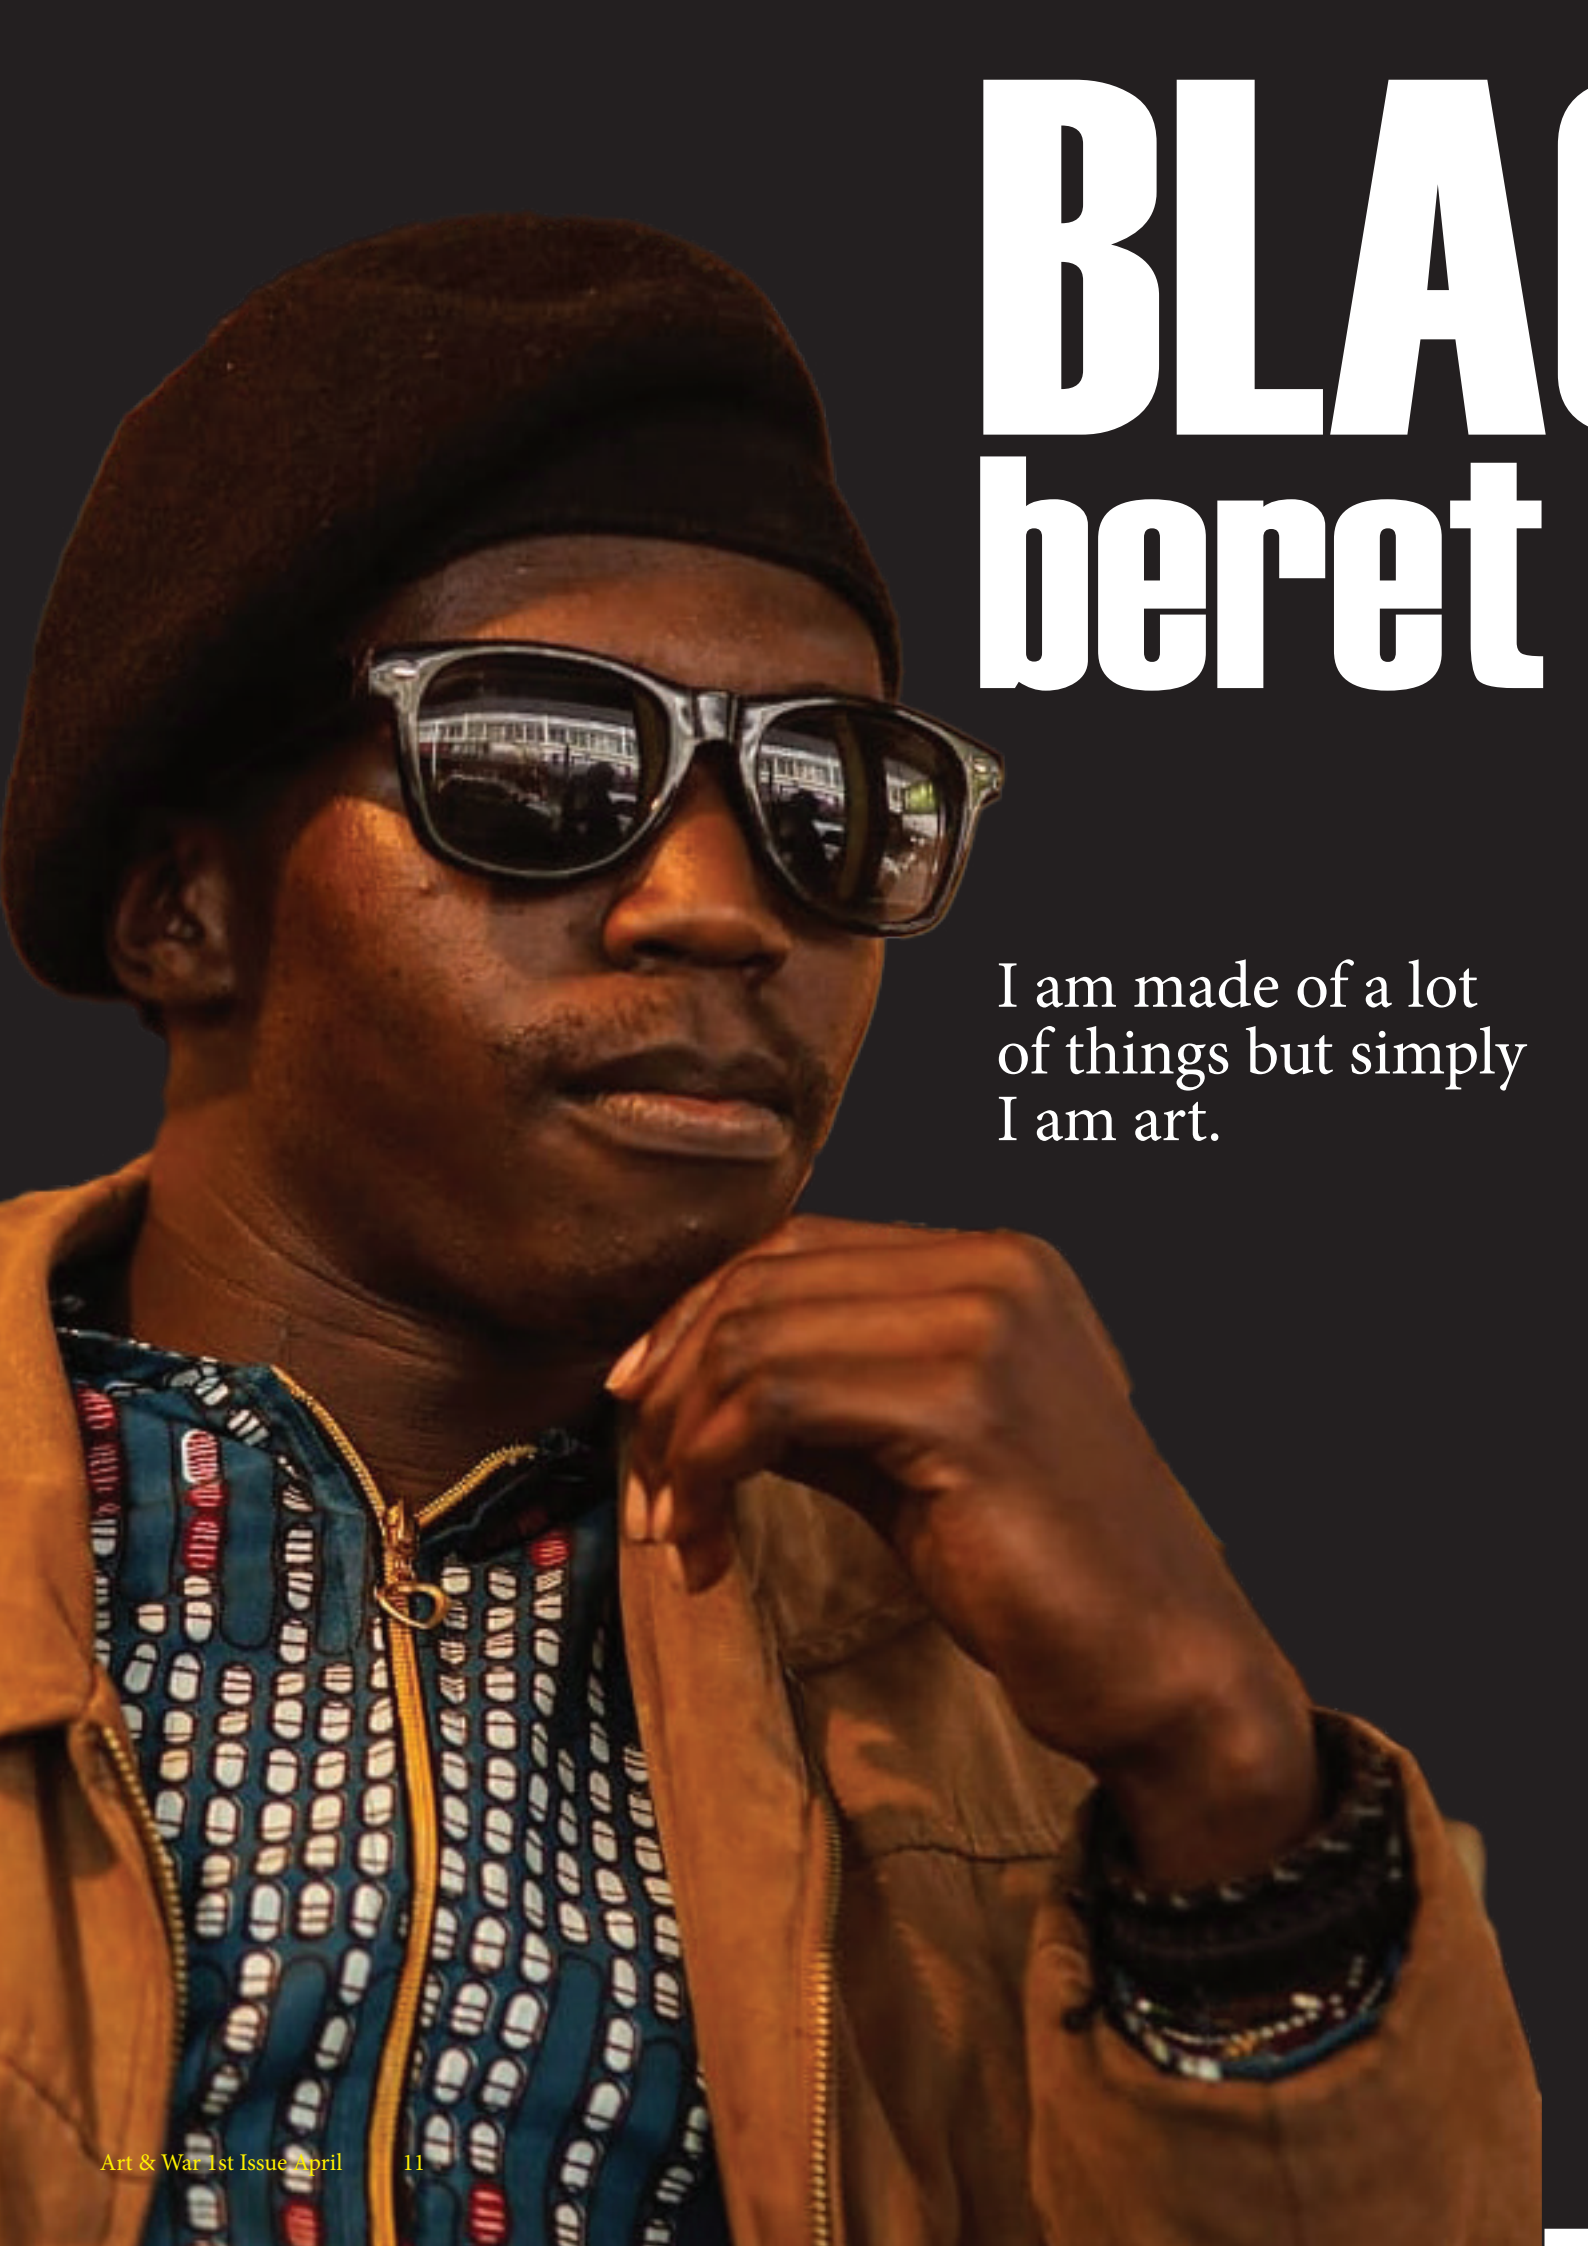

Art In Times of War

Art and war have an interesting relationship. In one way, the two are opposite: art is creative, war is destructive, but it's a bit more complicated than that. Art, perhaps more than other media, has an immediacy which makes it highly effective in telling the story of a war.

Art in wartime can promote war through propaganda, or it can protest against war. War inspires art, but it can also be looted in wartime or destroyed by war – think of, in recent times, the temples destroyed in Palmyra, Syria. War tends to show the darker side of humanity. After World War II, art began to become darker as a result of a more tragic period.

There was a tragic time in art, and action paintings were created to depict the tragedy. Action paintings tended to be more violent, frenzied. An example of this was the painting titled, 'Consequences of Art' by Peter Paul Rubens. In my opinion, artists like every Others respond to war differently. One may choose to reminisce the good days before war or one may choose to document the horrors of war. Both are equally important. Artists find their muse and sense of artistic stability in their way of expression. Some are chaotic. Some are calm. The chaotic pieces are usually used mainly for historical purposes as a way of documenting bits and pieces of what took place during the war. .

BLACK beret

I am made of a lot of things but simply
I am art.

If you ask me to describe myself in one word, I would say that am yet to interact with a single word that encompasses the entirety of who I am. My name is Santana Sino a name that I considered creatively chosen and artistic, so if you consider I creative then you haven't met my parents .

I was raised in a family of five having two smart brained siblings and parents. My name Santana is a unisex Spanish name meaning follower of St. Anna and commonly remembered from the Spanish lead guitarist Carlos Santana. I am a graphic designer, painter, writing and performing poet having published an anthology of poetry with a group of friends, a photographer and videographer and a fashionista. I start my drawing skills in class 5 where I used to sell the A4 pencil drawings at Kshs.1 to my classmates and later on in the evening came to tear of the painting from the top of the desk so that tomorrow they will request for another drawing

I proceeded with the drawing spirit to my high school, where I got introduced to poetry performing while in form 2 and start poetry writing in form 3 and participated in school talent shows and drama festivals on the two arts. They say courage is an opposing force to your fear, but while I was in my 4th year in high school courage was my only ticket to knowing what I wanted to do in life.

I made a desktop wall paper for our home computer that had like 15 to 20 poets that I looked up to and wished one day to work or meet with them. I joined campus to study counseling psychology but I later on changed my course due to the physical demand of the art industry and decided to pursue a fully based art and creative engaging course that will help me sharpen skills on my areas of specialty.

At each and every point in life I say thank you to the king above since sometimes he fulfills your wishes before you notice them since it was at that point in the year that I archived a five years achievement plan that happen in a year earlier. Later on I decide to give my painting side a chance to be known by the world and thanks to my artistic brother and close friend Lexus mshairi he gave me a chance to achieve this by doing his event planning and management for his recently released poetic album called Dreams za Tomorrow and through this I managed to work with many more poetry projects like From the margins Album by Dorphan, stage set design at Kwani open mic, Freedom book launch by Bint Aisha and any Rafinki based event.

Artistically it has never been an easy journey sourcing out for events and exhibitions for my paintings but hard work and determination sometimes offered an open hand into sharing this opportunities.

From the beginning of my career I knew I knew I had to create currently I study graphic design as my major interest in my campus life where I have also been able to perfect and polish my areas in painting and fashion. Apart from those I make accessories and decorative light bottles from recycled wine bottles, act a manager to a Fashion agency called Teekay Designs that deals with cloth construction and designing, a photographer and video content creator and a part from this a percussionist. I may take an hour trying to exhaust a list of the things I have done and can do but in simple words I am an all-round artist.

I have lived my life having my dad as my number role model, reason being he has always been there and observed my journey. I believe as an artist we need someone to look up to in your lane of work yes that's acceptable but one part that most creative ignore are the challenges that the mentors went through to get where they are, we all want smooth paths not knowing the cost to pay to having that achievement. How about you create your own story.

ART attack

“I believe that being an artist is something that one is born to do and not learned at school, I went on to study through practical experience, learning through trial and error and self-learning studying the works of famous artists as Leonardo Da Vinci, Michelangelo and my teachers.”

. After finishing high school I was planning to do literature and continue with creating art as hobby but got challenged by my father when he asked me to come up with designs for his upcoming business. He wanted a logo for his brand and impression of his products.

I accepted the challenge and did the work even though branding was new to me at that time. I did a lot of research and finally delivered his work. At that point I learnt that I could make a fortune from art.

I would accept most of the request since it gave me an opportunity to refine my skills as a creative. At some point while still in first year I was approached by a student leader who wanted poster designed for his campaigns. I accepted the challenge and teamed up with a third year student who guided me.

My stay in Kenyatta University has helped me acquire skills in painting and also sculpture. Most important is graphic design since I have learnt so much about different software's like Adobe Illustrator, which is where I primarily do most of my computer aided designs from.

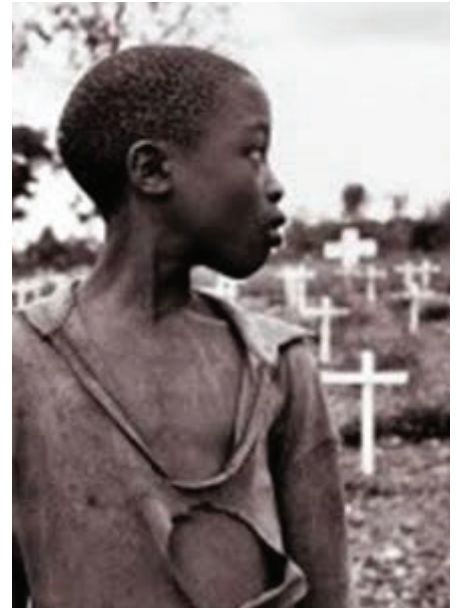

I believe that being an artist is something that one is born to do an not learned at school, I went on to study through practical experience, learning through trial and error and self-learning studying the works of famous artists as Leonardo Da Vinci, Michelangelo and my teachers.

My journey in art is what I simply like to refer to as 'art attack' since it came suddenly. Art has been part of me growing up and has been my story ever since. Welcome to my journey Art I am Aggrey Kadima.

I was fascinated with comic books growing up. The likes of "Supa Strika". My first experiences as an artist was when I started redrawing the characters in the comic books. This was back then in the primary school level. This made my parents notice something different since my family background was majorly into sciences but I was breaking odds with Art.

They decided to nurture my talent in the creative field by getting me crayons and sketch pads to work on my art skills.

Through primary school I used to assist my friends with illustration and diagrams especially in science classes which boosted my skills and confidence as an artist. My journey as an artist even grew further when I went to high school. At this point is when I started interacting with cartoons and caricatures at newspapers and magazine.

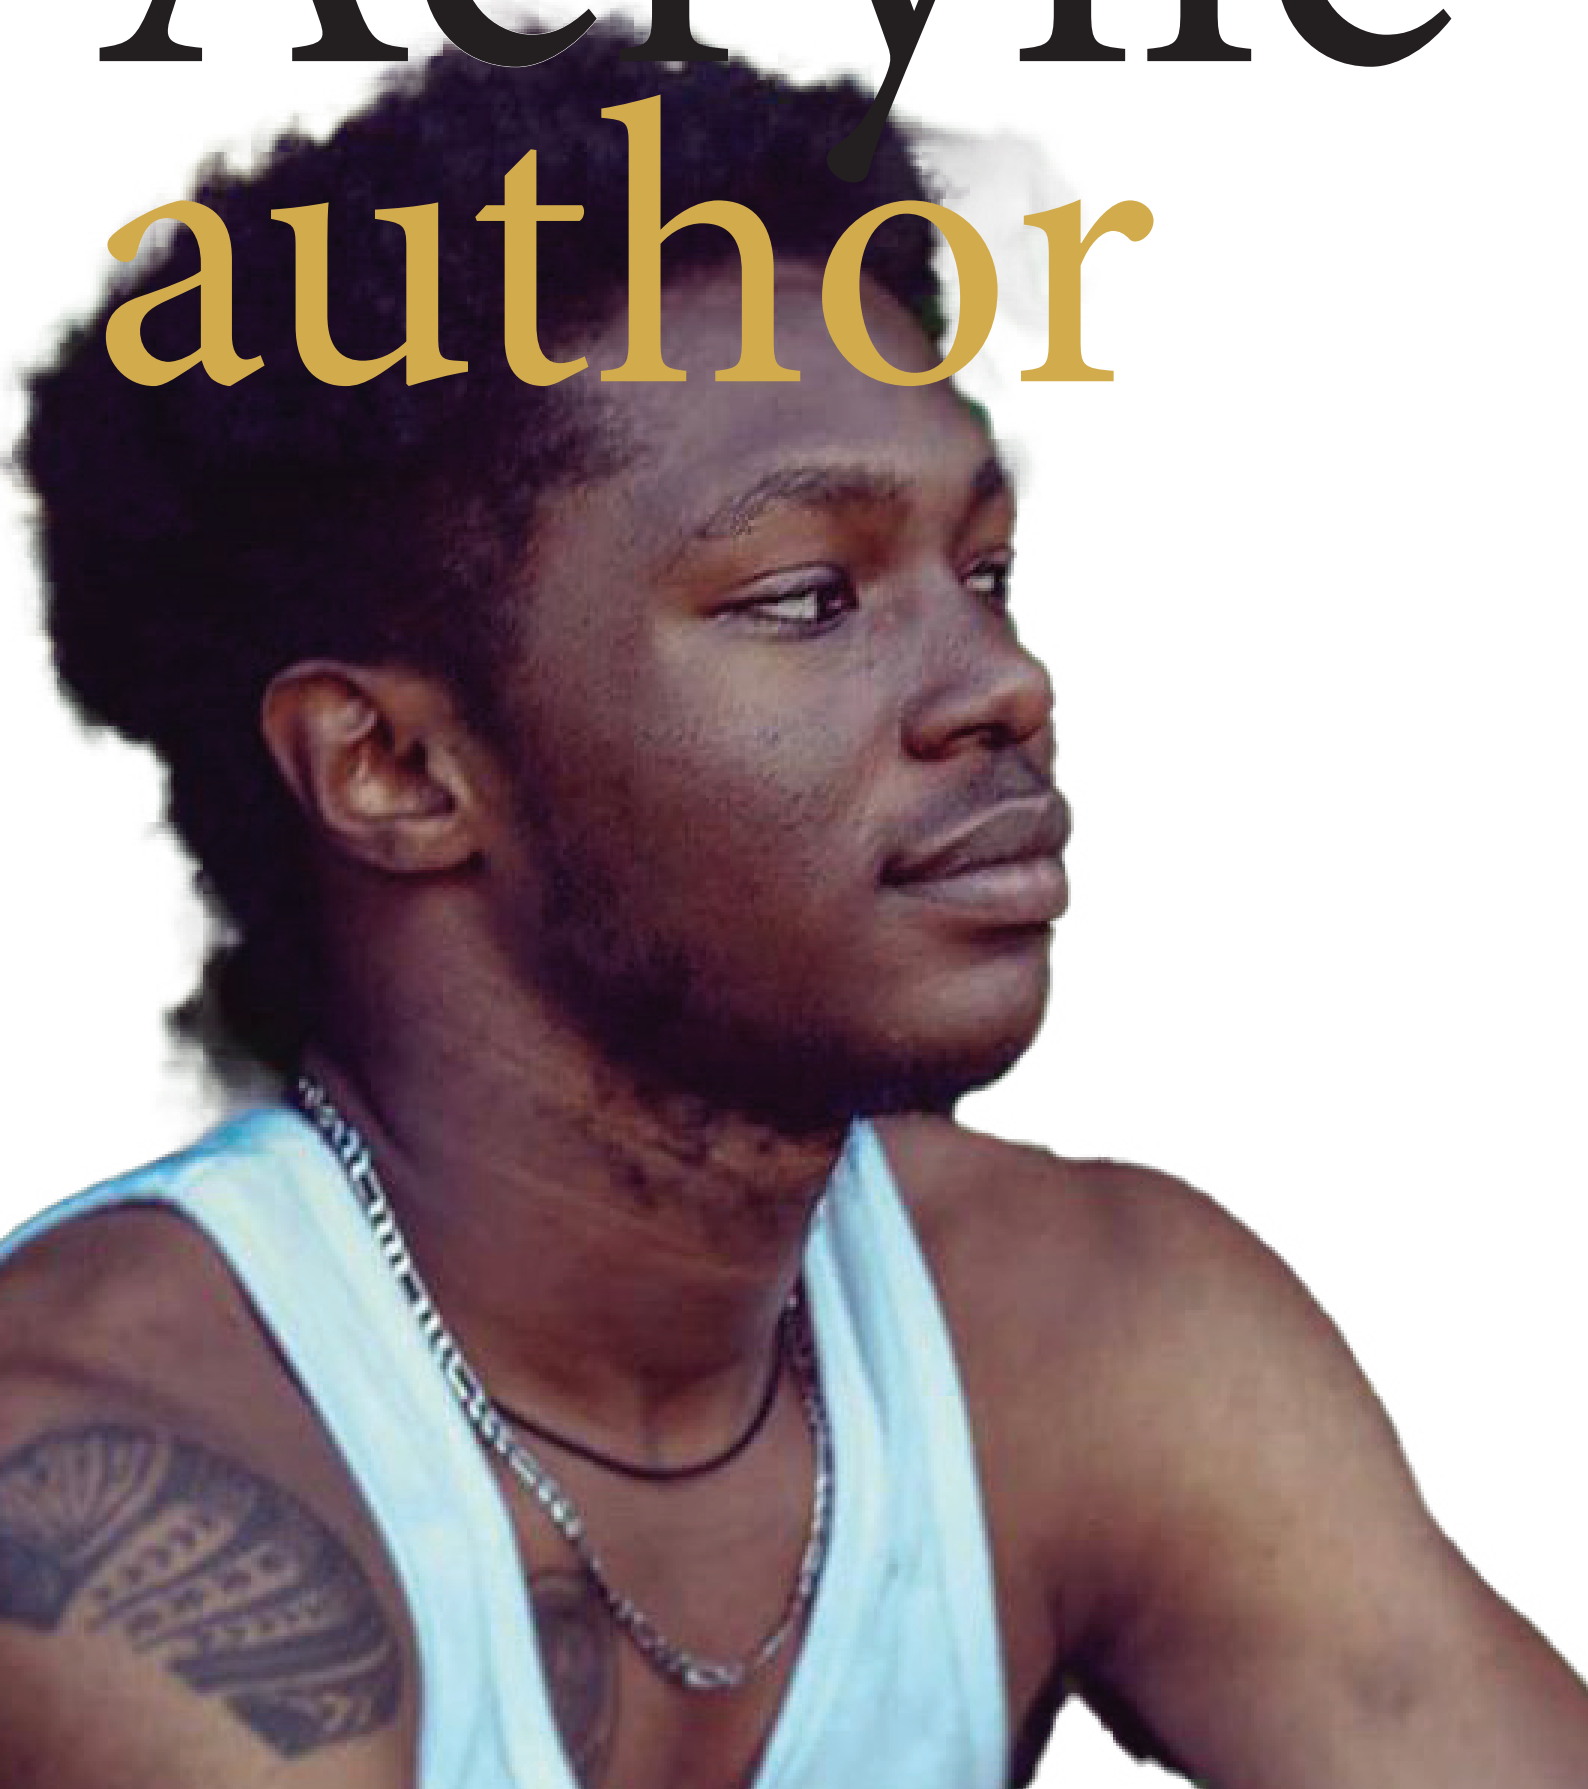

Art In Times of War

Art has been used as a means of expression for a long time. Part of the expression is to create awareness of what is happening in our society.

Art is instrumental in educating the community about wars and effects of war. Different artists have independently produced art to agitate for peace. In their work, these artists have stressed the need to end wars by depicting their brutality, and have tried to generate empathy for their opponents by showing the suffering their opponents experienced at their countries' hands. They have also used satire to mock the impotency and values of their countries' leaders.

In Kenya an artist did a painting on post-election violence which occurred in 2007 to communicate adverse effects of war by showing the damage caused like homeless families and markets burning down. With such a platform an artist can communicate how war can affect the entire society.

Acrylic author

I'm Hawi Samuel Omondi, an artist studying fine art and design at the Kenyatta University. I was born and raised in Eldoret on the 28th of September, 2000. I studied in 3 different primary schools. First was blossom then I later transferred to SOS and finally to Hill school where I completed my standard 8 from.

After my primary schooling, I went to Sunshine Secondary school in Nairobi where I went through 4 years of high school. It is in high school where I developed my interest for drawing.

So when I saw art was a subject offered in High school, I was compelled to take it as a sort of obligation to myself I was raised in a loving and humble home. My parents are both church involved individuals who love God.

My father is a pastor who ministers at Sirikwa Pentecostal Fellowship which is a church located in Eldoret. It is divided into four branches, one in annex called mission center, one in Huruma called Baharini, one in Kapsoya called Kapsoya and the main church branch located in town called Central

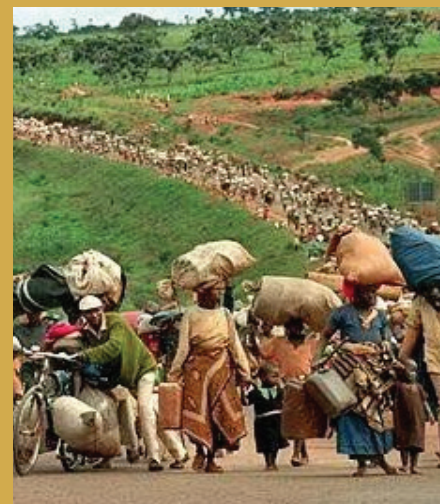

My two parents who have been present in my life have had such a huge impact in it in the way I was brought up to my morals and ethics. I will forever be in debt to them for how much they took care of me. I also have a sister, My hobby has always been drawing from way back when I was a baby. I used to enjoy watching a family friend take his time and draw portraits of different presidents e.g., President Obama, President Jomo Kenyatta, President Mwai Kibaki etc.

I then took up the challenge to start drawing. The more I drew the more skills and techniques I discovered. I can humbly say up to date I am still learning and discovering new skills and techniques that vary in every aspect of art whether in graphite drawing, painting, sculpture, graphics etc. was told by Dennis, the family friend who drew president portraits, that the longer you take in a piece the better the outcome. He told me this when I was around the age of 9 and yet these words stuck with me.

To be honest as you grow the less time you'll have to draw with the required amount needed. You'll either change your tactic and space out time when you'll do a piece.

Although we know us artists love to finish a piece in one sitting. My only hope for this country is to take art seriously just as the other courses. Because art is not just what we draw on a piece of paper or canvas, art is everywhere. It's what we eat, what we wear, how we walk, how we move, dance, sports, music, sing, make love.

Art is the very fact you have a routine you follow every day for the rest of your life. I have a vision to open up an art school which will be in partnership with France.

Art in Times of War

"To talk about art and war, we need to break down the term and describe them as it is. Art is something that is created with imagination and skill and that is beautiful while war according to Wikipedia is an intense armed conflict between states, governments, societies and paramilitary groups such as mercenaries, insurgents and militias, generally characterized by extreme violence, aggression and destruction.

The artists depict the opposing side as aggressive, powerful and savage in order to stimulate fear for the opposing side. War itself is a beautiful concept that I feel can only be truly appreciated by non-participants.

It's beautiful to see the dirty and smiling faces of your colleagues when they finally reach your position after you have frantically called for reinforcements. It's a beauty to see the army holding each other going home proud after a battle to reunite with their loved ones. It's Art when an ex-soldier shows you different scars on his body and has a hard told story of each and every one of them and how he got them.

the ART wants what it wants

Ola, is a young lady full of passion, love and adventures strong in will but tends to be soft in the inside. Born in Homabay and raised all over the country. Kenya is her nationality. She is in her early twenties depends on who is asking, in campus with a lot of experience to share, the zeal and the fire burning in her eyes speaks for itself.

At a young age Ola was an explorer, curiosity was the order of a younger years, all kids are; As a little girl it wasn't obvious yet what she wanted but dreams of chasing butterflies in a park was enough at She remembers little close to nothing about her childhood, which has seen her battle with anxiety and depression at its peak. She highly advocates for mental wellness and awareness advocates for mental wellness and awareness.

She is a business oriented person, an artist, Fashion enthusiast, humanitarian, an aunt, a daughter, sister, friend, and a mother of one. Soon to be a wife. Shes an ambivert who believes in women empowerment. History fascinates her to the core.

The brand owner of Ola's style, fashion is an art too she says, everyone has their own unique style "I love seeing people dressed in and killing THE look" Rihanna is her role model, an artist, a business woman and a fashion icon of all time.

‘In a world full of trend choose to be a classic’ goes one of her favorite chanel fashion quotes. Ola has so many plans for this brand they will be put in place eventually towards the course of the year. Her love for pets and plants has seen her mother her little six month old kitten, Ginja, trying her luck with plants and in the near future she'd mother one cute puppy.

Pet parenting has had a lot of impact in her life in terms of responsibility, patience, time management and generally her social life, "for instance Her day starts with feeding him, he'll be waiting for her at the door upon her return and it ends with cuddling with him to sleep, which she always against but Ginja always crawls in bed with her.

When she's not busy with school or work, her go to activities are indoors and a few outdoor with the loves her life, her friends. Her love for humanitarian services, freedom and art pushes her towards traveling and exploring the world, she claims it awakes her inner child.

Art in times of war

Art and war if you intend to think about them have some really dangerous similarities but one is greater than the other, both speaks volumes of things that can not be put in word, blurry and unclear, one is aesthetic and beauty is an vital element while the latter is destructive and one question that rings a bell is there beauty in violence and if its so how?is there an art to war and war, can it be art?

If the need of both are ignored then the end product is brutal. I am a full believer of giving the heart what it desires,the relationship between war and art is inseparable,art as been used since time in memorial as a form of communication, therefore throughout history we've seen war artist who had different roles.... Art back then was used to communicate different emotions from rebellion to propaganda that relates to war to recording wars, artists had great impact, they still do.

Edgar Keng'ara (b. 1993 in Nairobi, Kenya) is a Kenyan artist known for his pursuit of painting hyperrealism paintings using both acrylic and oil paints, which began in 2015 and continues apace today. In mid 2008, He had a habit of drawing outline shapes of various vehicles he saw.

Ever since that day, he became passionate with drawing anything that made him happy. With his consistency in self-taught in drawing, in 2011 he started drawing portraits as a business. By the time he was four years old, Edgar went to a Kindergarten school called Kamakoa Primary

His mother was his world. At seven years old, he joined another primary school still in Kisumu called Kindubay Primary school. Here is where he met a new friend by the name Michael Jackson. Jackson was not only the comedia in the class but also one of the talented dancer we had in the class. They were friends for some few years until Edgar's mother was given a job transfer to Nairobi city.

By 2019, he was good at it and started doing Murals in catholic churches and street walls, designing and painting basketball courts. In 2018, Edgar was lucky to have an opportunity to join

In 2015, he was introduced to paints by friend and that is where everything changed. Painting

Pursuing a degree in Bachelor of Fine Arts and Design. Here is where he mastered his talents and produces magnificent art pieces.

During his time at Kenyatta University, he had an opportunity to interact with one of the Basketball Academy (Far East Basketball Association) where he was able to expand his talents. He was even called to teach some of the kids on how to draw and made some of the kids realise their talents in art. To Edgar's surprise, she also had feelings for him too. Their relationship was going quite well until a few months later where they broke up. This was heartbreaking for Edgar that he did not focus on his job. He started coming to work late, sometimes with a stench of vodka on his breath. This bad conduct led him to be issued with 3 warning letters from the management and later on got fired in the early 2015.

At 15 years, he completed his primary school at Bondeni primary school, a public school found in Embakasi area. His persistence and hard work enabled him to attain a mean grade of B plain in 2013. But due to lack of enough funds, he could not join any college of his choice. So, instead, he went to a computer classes near his home where he studied for a certificate in packages. Later on, he was lucky to get a job at Samasource digitals at Sameer Business park. He worked at Samasource as an agent for about 2 years, and at Samasource, he found his first love by the name Tracy. To him, Tracy was a goddess of beauty. It took him quite some time before he could approach her and tell her how he felt. To Edgar's surprise, she also had feelings for him too. Their

The Art of War is an ancient Chinese military treatise dating from the Late Spring and Autumn Period (roughly 5th century BC). The work, which is attributed to the ancient Chinese military strategist Sun Tzu ("Master Sun", also spelled Sunzi), is composed of 13 chapters. Each one is devoted to a different set of skills (or "art") related to warfare and how it applies to military strategy and tactics.

For almost 1,500 years it was the lead text in an anthology that was formalized as the Seven Military Classics by Emperor Shenzong of Song in 1080. The Art of War remains the most influential strategy text in East Asian warfare[1] and has influenced both Far Eastern and Western military thinking, business tactics, legal strategy, lifestyles and beyond.

The book was translated into French and published in 1772 (re-published in 1782) by the French Jesuit Jean Joseph Marie Amiot. The first annotated English translation was completed and published by Lionel Giles in 1910.
